

Bias Report and Support System Summary Report

Below is a summary of the reports submitted to the Bias Report and Support System (BRSS) between its launch on January 13, 2014 and the end of the quarter on March 31, 2014. Information from the BRSS underscores the need for the university community to recognize the impact of actions and words on fellow community members.

Washington University in St. Louis is committed to fostering an environment that values diversity, inclusion and human dignity. For each member of our community, this means becoming more in tune with how what we say and do might affect others. The information in this report gives the university more insights on students' day-to-day experiences with the intention of promoting discussion and taking steps to ensure that our community is inclusive and respects everyone.

Context

The Bias Report and Support System (BRSS) at Washington University was created to promote an inclusive community by providing a clear and streamlined process for reporting incidents of hate, bias, and/or discrimination against students and by offering support and referral resources when requested. The BRSS is composed of a six-person team of trained Washington University students, staff, and administrators who are tasked with three primary responsibilities:

- Support: Support students who have reported that they witnessed or were the target of a bias-related incident;
- Refer: Refer students to campus partners, groups, or individuals who can provide ongoing support;
- Inform: Inform the larger Washington University community of the frequency and general nature of bias incidents reported through the BRSS.

Reporting Structure

Reports can be submitted in one of two ways: "For Information Only" or "For Support and Referral". If the first option is selected, the reporter will remain anonymous and as such, there is no opportunity for the BRSS team to follow up with the reporter. Depending on the circumstances, the information disclosed may be forwarded to appropriate university administrators. If the latter option is selected, a BRSS team member will schedule an in-person meeting with the reporter to discuss the incident in greater depth, and identify and explain available campus resources and other referrals. After the meeting, the assigned BRSS team member will send a follow-up email to the reporter to ask if additional support is needed. Brief de-identified descriptions of all of the submissions will be published in this summary report.

Reading This Report

In this report, graphs summarizing the identities perceived to be targeted and the location or setting of the bias incident are presented first, followed by brief narrative descriptions of the reports. Reporter confidentiality is crucial to the success of the system; as such, any potentially identifying information has been removed from the narrative summaries. For reports that were filed "For Support and Referral", the referrals given are noted. Finally, the BRSS is not an investigative body, and thus inclusion in this summary report does not signify the completeness or accuracy of any incident. In some cases it was evident from the face of the report or after contact with the alleged reporter that the report was fictitious. Examples include reports submitted against or on behalf of fictitious names. These reports are not included in this summary.

Follow Through

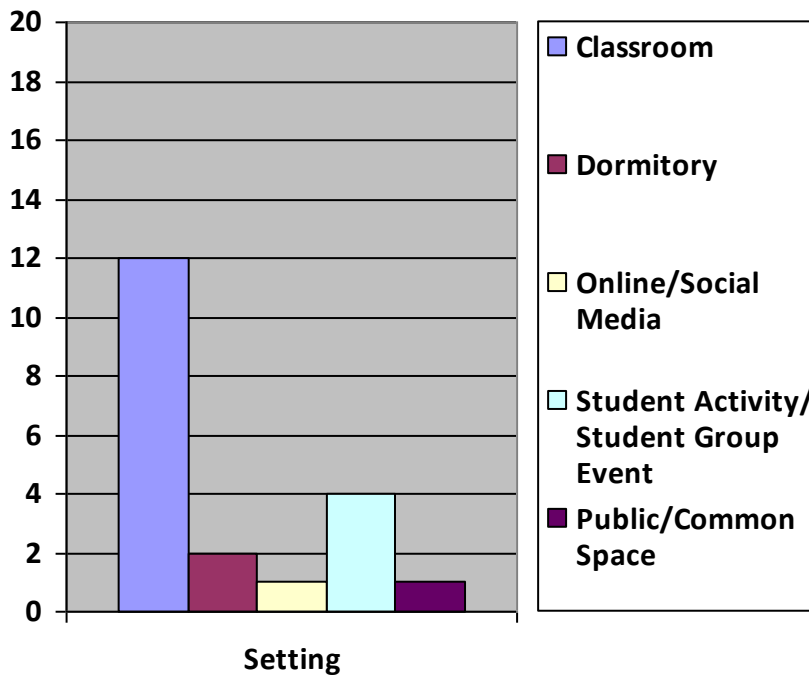

Prior to the release of this report, the BRSS Coordinator met with both the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Students and the Office of the Provost to discuss trends and potential further action. These offices have shared the information with school Deans and the Associate Vice Chancellors in student services.
